

A SALUTE TO SERVICE: OFFICER MILLER AND THE CALIFORNIA HIGHWAY PATROL

On a winding stretch of Highway 1, amidst the frenetic pulse of Concours week in Carmel, a situation arose that threatened not only the safety of the Batmobile, but also the public. A dangerous breakdown of a specialized, twenty-foot-long vehicle—the Batmobile—left it vulnerable during the heart of rush hour. The usual chaos of the road was amplified by the unique nature of the vehicle and the Concours event attraction, presenting a challenge far beyond a typical roadside incident.

It was in this moment that the California Highway Patrol arrived—Officer Miller—a figure of quiet command and unwavering poise. With a calmness that belied the urgency of the situation, he took control. He did not simply secure the scene; he pervaded the space with a sense of assurance. Officer Miller skillfully managed the swirling currents of traffic, steering curious motorists away and creating a safe perimeter around us. His professionalism ensured that no one was put in harm's way.

Officer Miller's most crucial contribution, however, was in the methodical and intelligent way he solved the logistical challenge of our breakdown. Recognizing the Batmobile's specialized nature, he took the time to locate and arrange a towing service capable of handling such a unique and substantial vehicle. His attention to detail and proactive problem-solving were both reassuring and inspiring.

Officer Miller's service—and the capable assistance of his protege who ensured the safe and professional transport of the Batmobile back to the Batcave without any damage—is a testament to the exemplary standards of the California Highway Patrol. It is in these moments, when order is brought to chaos, that the true value of their work is most profoundly felt. We have the utmost respect and gratitude for his service.
